Lets have a (soil) block party! Learning a new method of seed starting

Sustainability is a focal point of many successful farms and gardens. Choosing methods that are economic, functional and repeatable can make the difference between a successful planting, and a failing one. This month, we are focusing on one of those sustainable methods. Soil blocking is a way to start your seeds without having to buy new plastic cell trays every year. Join us this month to learn from Cindy Gingham, the owner of Happy Hill Homestead, about this method of seed starting.
